COMMODITY & CURRENCY...

- Gold fell for a second day in London on speculation a halt of the dollar's drop may reduce the metal's appeal as an alternative investment. The U.S. Dollar Index rose as much as 0.4 percent to 79.46, the first gain in four days, after yesterday falling to the lowest since Dec. 18. Before closing yesterday, gold touched a 14-week peak and silver reached its highest in almost 10 months.
- Crude oil retreated from a seven-month high in New York on signs OPEC's output is climbing and as traders who bet on rising prices sold futures to lock in gains. Oil fell for the first time in seven days after the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised production by 1.5 percent in May according to a Bloomberg News survey. The U.S. Energy Department will publish its weekly supply report tomorrow.
- Copper fell from the highest in more than seven months in London as a rebound in the dollar dragged commodities lower and some investors said gains were too rapid. Stockpiles of copper in warehouses monitored by the LME slid for an 18th straight session to 309,225 tons, the lowest since Dec. 12. Inventories have declined 44 percent from a high this year on Feb. 25 as China bought metal to increase reserves.
- Corn and wheat futures in Chicago fell from their highest in about eight-months as warmer, drier weather in the U.S. helped accelerate planting, boosting yield potential. Soybeans also declined. Planting of the U.S. corn crop, the world's biggest, was about 93 percent finished as of May 31, up from 82 percent a week earlier, the Department of Agriculture said yesterday. About 89 percent of the spring-wheat crop was seeded, compared with 79 percent the previous week. Soybean planting was 66 percent completed, up from 48 % a week earlier.
- The U.S. a gauge of the greenback against six major currencies, rose as much as 0.4 percent, the first advance in four days. A stronger dollar makes commodities priced in the currency more expensive for investors holding euros and pounds. The pound pared its declines versus the euro and the dollar after U.K. mortgages approvals rose more.
- The dollar and the yen rose against the euro as stocks snapped three days of gains, spurring demand for the currencies as a refuge from the global financial turmoil. The yen strengthened the most in four days against the European currency on speculation Japanese exporters brought home overseas earnings after the European currency reached an eight-week high. The euro weakened against the dollar before the European jobless rate climbed to a four-year high, giving the central bank more reason to cut interest rates or expand its asset-purchase plan when it meets this week.
- The Malaysian ringgit and the Philippine peso led declines in Asian currencies on speculation monetary authorities in the region will stem gains to bolster overseas earnings. The ringgit retreated from a five-month high as the government predicted the economy will keep shrinking through the third quarter. Taiwan's dollar fell the most in almost seven weeks as the Commercial Times reported, citing unidentified traders, that the central bank bought $1.8 billion to slow an advance in the island's currency. The Australian dollar fell from near its strongest in eight months as the central bank said "scope remains for some further easing" of interest rates. New Zealand's currency declined.
- South Korea's won fell, erasing an earlier advance, on speculation policy makers will intervene to moderate the pace of the currency's appreciation. Bonds drop The currency ended a three-day rally after Yonhap News reported North Korea is preparing to launch a medium-range missile. The nation's foreign-exchange reserves jumped by the most on record last month, indicating the central bank stepped up intervention, as the won rallied almost 24 percent since the end of February the best performance in Asia
